

2011 Tennessee Physiological Society Meeting

Thursday, October 13

- 5-8:00 pm Registration and check in – Stanton-Gerber Hall lower foyer
Poster set up and informal viewing - Light refreshments served
- 6:15 pm Meeting opening and welcome
- 6:30-7:30 pm Opening Lecture – David L. Williams, PhD
Department of Surgery - Quillen College of Medicine
- "The macrophage class A scavenger receptor (SR-A) plays a central role in the pathophysiology of sepsis and organ ischemia/reperfusion injury".
- 8:00 - ? pm Happy Hour – off campus

Friday, October 14

- 8:30 am Welcome to the morning session
- 8:30-10 am Morning symposium featuring undergrad and grad student presentations
(Sponsored by Kent Scientific, Corp.)
- 10-10:30 am Coffee break
- 10:30-noon Morning symposium continued – post doc presentations
- 12-1 pm Lunch
- 1-3 pm Poster session – judging for student awards
- 1-2 pm Intro to Phun Week – Information for teachers and volunteer scientists
- 2-3 pm AD Instruments workshop on technology for teaching and research
- 3-4 pm APS Invited Lecture – William C. Aird, MD
Director, Center for Vascular Biology Research
Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center
Harvard Medical School
- "Endothelial phenotypes in health and disease".
- 4-4:30 pm TPS business meeting
- 4:30-5 pm Student awards and recognitions
- 5 pm Concluding remarks – meeting closes